Cap Reform Agenda 2000 Minutes

The Common Agricultural Policy (CAP), still representing the most important and most comprehensive policy of the Community in terms, at least, of integrity and budget, could not but be an essential part of the Agenda 2000 package. In fact, its proposed new reform was perhaps the most "delicate" and the most "complicated" issue of the package.

Agenda 2000, Reform of the Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) and Cross-Compliance. The CAP has had a significant influence on European farming since the 1950's. In its early years, the main focus was to reach the goal of increasing agricultural productivity as quickly as possible. This approach soon brought results and in some sectors extensive surpluses which needed management in the form of production restrictions such as milk quotas.

The Agenda 2000 package included proposals on CAP reform, a new Financial Framework for 2000-6, and enlargement. It was agreed by the European Council in Berlin in March 1999. The CAP reform built upon the 1992 reforms, and created the second pillar of the CAP, but budgetary considerations led to a considerable weakening of the package compared to the Commission's proposal.

Measuring the costs and benefits of the CAP

From the outset, the European Union's common agricultural policy (CAP) was subject to scathingly criticism. Despite this, no substantial reform was undertaken until 1992. Then, in little more than a decade, from 1992 to 2003, the CAP experienced three significant reforms: the 1992 MacSharry Reform, the 1999 Agenda 2000 Reform, and the 2003 Fischler Reform, profoundly changing its original design.
